

Which sister is prettier? Oh,
It doesn't matter. But it does to them.
One can throw, and one is slow.

They love each other; that's no show,
But one got the boy and one is slim—
Which sister is prettier? Oh,

Hand-in-hand they smile in every photo.
Two beautifully unique flowers of the same stem.
Different hair, noses—Different people.

This shirt looks better on me, I know.
Sure, but I got kissed by him—
Which sister is prettier? Oh,

You have forced them to hate each other so;
No, they love each other, but still, one needs a trim,
One can throw, and one is slow.

Rivalry, conflict, war; Later, they will know:
Sisterhood is not a contest, but a gem.
Which sister is prettier? Oh,
One can throw, and one is slow.

SAVANNAH PRICE

Savannah Price is a tired but inspired graduate candidate, beginning photographer, novice blogger, hopeful author, and avid creative. When she is not writing essays for her impending English graduate degree or reading poetry and prose, she is writing for her blog or her leisure. She is always trying to better herself, whether it be through journaling, yoga, exercise or meditation, and she loves all things creative and natural. You can find her on Instagram @savannahprxce.